I bought 4 different Adafruit RoR3D accelerometers, and I want to use how many batteries can I use? Can I use a few batteries for one RoR3D, or can I use 1 battery for 4 RoR3D? If I have to use one battery for all the 4 RoR3D, is it a problem when it is too heavy? A: There are 3 Vbat pins on the RoR3D which are grounds, and each pin is internally connected to a 1N914 zener diode. As you can see, they are series connected, so if you had 4 Arduinos, then you would have a series-lightning connection, and it would be likely to short out when you are in the active state, and likely to give you problems. From the spec sheet, you can see that each accelerometer draws an average of 50ma. So, you would need about 4x50ma=200ma.

That said, the RoR3D has a fairly large onboard battery which should handle that load, and maybe a bit more. That said, you can also use powered-adapters. These 595f342e71
