Goldmann-Witmer syndrome, also known as chronic idiopathic thrombocytopenic purpura, is a rare condition consisting of recurrent episodes of purpura accompanied by normal or subnormal platelet counts. Although spontaneous remission occurs in most patients, chronic treatment of the thrombocytopenia is necessary. It is characterized by the presence of an excessive number of megakaryocytes in the bone marrow with normal or increased platelet production. Recently, it has been reported that infections may trigger acute episodes of chronic idiopathic thrombocytopenic purpura in patients with the antigenic exposure of herpes simplex virus, adenovirus, and toxoplasma gondii. We present the case of a 22-year-old woman who was seen at our center as she presented with purpura, ocular trauma, and inability to walk. The thrombocytopenia occurred intermittently. Her personal and family medical histories were negative for any infection. However, the plate

"I'll Have the Beetroot in the Salad" In the depths of winter, as the days are getting longer, I bring forth the vegetables that will be tucked into the cooler for the year. I make a large batch and share them with my family so we can enjoy them throughout the year.

This winter I am prepping a variety of root vegetables. On the menu this week is a root vegetable salad with three different varieties of carrots. On Monday we prepared the carrots: plain, roasted, and with a pure maple dressing. Simplicity is the ultimate goal of home cookery, but it's an elusive concept that varies with each cook. This week I give credit to my good friend Helene of Root to a Full Plate. I'm sure you will find this salad as delicious as I did this week. The efficacy of endotracheal tube cuff inflation: a meta-analysis of clinical studies. The aim of this meta-analysis is to summarize the evidence about effectiveness of cuff inflation in prevention of post-operative pulmonary complications and to identify determinants of efficacy. We searched for randomized controlled trials (RCTs) comparing endotracheal cuff inflation with no cuff inflation in adult patients after general anesthesia. We identified six RCTs comprising a total of 402 patients. There was no

string DoOperation() { // Begin synchronous methods Thread.Sleep(1000); string result = DoAsync(); // End synchronous methods return result; } public async Task DoAsync() { // Start asynchronous operations } So, in the above example, DoAsync will only begin running once
