The Origins and Development of New Age Music

New Age music emerged in the late 1960s and early 1970s as a response to the social and cultural changes that were taking place at the time. The Vietnam War, the civil rights movement, the environmental movement, the counterculture, and the rise of Eastern religions and philosophies all contributed to a sense of disillusionment and dissatisfaction with the mainstream society and its values. Many people sought alternative ways of living, thinking, and healing that were more holistic, spiritual, and creative.

Music was one of the mediums that expressed and facilitated this quest for personal and collective transformation. Some of the musicians who pioneered New Age music were influenced by Eastern music traditions such as Indian classical music, Tibetan Buddhist chants, Japanese shakuhachi flute, and Indonesian gamelan. They also experimented with electronic instruments and techniques such as synthesizers, sequencers, tape loops, and sound effects to create ambient and atmospheric sounds that evoked different moods and states of consciousness.

Some of the early examples of New Age music are Tony Scott's Music for Zen Meditation (1964), Paul Horn's Inside (1968), Irv Teibel's Environments series (1969-1979), Deuter's D (1971), Popol Vuh's In den Gärten Pharaos (1971), Brian Eno's Ambient 1: Music for Airports (1978), and Steven Halpern's Spectrum Suite (1975). These albums explored themes such as meditation, relaxation, nature, spirituality, and cosmic harmony.

The Growth and Diversity of New Age Music

In the 1980s and 1990s, New Age music became more popular and diverse as it reached a wider audience through radio stations, record labels, magazines, festivals, and bookstores. Some of the factors that contributed to this growth were the increasing interest in alternative medicine, yoga, meditation, astrology, crystals, channeling, reincarnation, and other New Age practices; the emergence of digital technology that enabled easier production and distribution of music; and the recognition of New Age music as a legitimate genre by the music industry and the media.

New Age music also expanded its musical influences and styles to include elements from Celtic music, Native American music, African music, Latin American music, Middle Eastern music, Gregorian chant, classical music, jazz fusion, progressive rock, ambient techno, worldbeat, ethno-ambient, space music, neoclassical new age music. Some of the artists who represented these diverse subgenres were Enya, Vangelis, Kitaro, Yanni, Loreena McKennitt, Deep Forest, Mike Oldfield, Andreas Vollenweider. Enigma. Dead Can Dance. Clannad. Medwyn Goodall. David Arkenstone. Constance Demby. Jean Michel Jarre. Tangerine Dream. Robert Rich. Steve Roach. Patrick O'Hearn. David Lanz. George Winston. Michael Hedges. William Ackerman.
